

This conference addresses the psychosocial risk factors at work, but also the ensuing disorders using interdisciplinary and comparative approaches. The objective is to compare experiments, cultures and knowledge to broach all the dimensions of this issue. It will lead to the creation of interactions between the stakeholders of occupational risk prevention and the researchers for a better understanding of the needs in the field of psychosocial risk prevention.

The final goal is to evaluate the way the French system takes into account psychosocial risks regarding foreign systems. The comparison will bring new perspectives on a topic which requires an interdisciplinary approach to understand all the outlines and the stakes.
